

Avalanche Awareness Day

Chamonix-based one day course

Benefit from the experience of International Mountain Guide Richard Mansfield who has over 30 ski seasons' experience. He also holds the Canadian Avalanche Association Level 2 Qualification, "an advanced programme for people who work full time in avalanche safety and control operations". Qualified in 1997.

Avalanche awareness course summary

We begin the day with a briefing where we look at safety equipment. We also review avalanche and weather forecasts to better understand snow conditions and avalanche risk.

This course is fun, educational and involves a lot of skiing using terrain to explain decision making, avalanche avoidance (always a good thing) and group safety in avalanche terrain as well as transceiver training and what to do in an avalanche incident.

Avalanche awareness – is it for me?

Whether you board or ski off piste, having some experienced, professional avalanche training is a no-brainer. Learn and be safer. Remember if you are riding out of bounds all your party MUST have avalanche transceivers, shovels and probes and know how to use them.
